TENNESSEE STATE PARKS MEEMAN-SHELBY FOREST STATE PARK

Meeman-Shelby Forest State Park

is a 13,000-acre hardwood bottomland area bordering the mighty Mississippi River 13 miles north of Memphis. Most of the park is mature Bald Cypress and Tupelo swamp where there is great opportunity for hunting. Most of the facilities are on top of the majestic Chickasaw Bluffs, formed from wind-blown silt deposited in ancient times that rise from the bottomlands and are covered with large oaks, American beech, hickory, and sweet gum. Wildlife such as deer, turkey, otter, beaver, foxes, and bobcats are plentiful throughout the forest. Over 200 species of songbirds, waterfowl, shorebirds, and birds of prey, including the American Bald Eagle can be seen; the area is a favorite for bird-watchers.

Historical significance

The park was named in part for the late Edward J. Meeman, the courageous conservation editor of Scripps-Howard newspapers who was instrumental in establishing this site. The creation of the park was rooted in the idea that the area would be a preserve for flora and fauna where people could view and enjoy a wilderness so close to Memphis.

Cabins

Meeman-Shelby has six two-bedroom vacation cabins situated along the shore of Poplar Tree Lake. They are ideal for family vacations and fishing trips and can sleep up to six. Picnic tables and grills are located outside for outdoor enjoyment by the lake. Make advance reservations at the Visitors Center.
